RUSLAN AKSENOV

(Domodedovo, Russia)

Main themes of creativity:

dark art

Preferred medium:

monochrome toned graphics in a concise illustrative manner

This monochrome work transforms the image of a cat into a hybrid, creature-like form suspended between anatomy, ornament, and metamorphosis. Dense black linework builds the body out of ribs, coils, cavities, and shell-like structures, turning the familiar silhouette into something ancient, skeletal, and strangely alive. The absence of color intensifies the drawing's graphic force and directs attention to texture, rhythm, and invented anatomy. Rather than depicting an animal naturalistically, the work explores mutation, vulnerability, and the uneasy beauty of bodies imagined beyond nature.

GANNA ALYOUSIF

(Saudi Arabia, Medina)

Main themes of creativity:

surreal female images

Preferred medium:

acrylic painting

With its cool blue background and vivid orange clothing, this portrait turns a cat into a poised, fashion-conscious character. The glasses, headscarf, and direct gaze give the work both humor and presence, while the contrast of soft fur and crisp accessories adds visual tension. Playful yet composed, the painting borrows from classic portrait conventions and reimagines them through a feline subject, celebrating style, personality, and the quiet confidence of a well-dressed observer.

Set against a luminous gold background, this playful cat portrait balances humor with a sense of quiet elegance. The metallic surface gives the small painting an icon-like presence, turning the animal into a stylish, almost ceremonial figure. The contrast between the rich gold field, blue jacket, and orange scarf adds warmth and clarity, while the oversized glasses bring personality and wit. Compact in scale but visually striking, the work feels both decorative and self-assured.

Set against a bold red background, this cat portrait combines fashion, humor, and attitude. Oversized sunglasses, a patterned scarf, and a bright palette turn the animal into a self-possessed character with unmistakable retro flair. The painting plays with the language of portraiture, replacing human vanity with feline poise and charm. Both decorative and witty, the work captures the pleasure of style as performance.

Main theme: landscape

Preferred technique:
acrylic painting

Set against a quiet lake and distant mountains, this painting combines landscape and portrait in a calm, dreamlike scene. A white cat sits among deep blue flowers, its pale fur catching the cool light and standing out against the насыщенный foreground. The contrast between still water, open sky, and the intimate presence of the animal creates a mood of solitude and gentle mystery. Rather than telling a story directly, the work invites a slower kind of looking, where nature and the feline figure seem equally self-contained and serene.

A Field of Dreams, acrylic on canvas,
30x40cm, 2026, price: €300

This painting shows a sleeping ginger cat in a sunlit meadow. Loose, expressive brushwork gives the fur vivid texture, while the soft landscape behind it opens into a calm view of trees, sky, and summer light. The contrast between the cat's body and the wide field creates a sense of intimacy within openness. More than a simple animal portrait, the work conveys trust, stillness, and belonging in nature.

A Window In The Rain, acrylic on canvas,
30x40cm, 2026, price: €300

This painting captures a cat seated at a rain-streaked window, looking out over a muted cityscape of rooftops and distant towers. The contrast between the animal's warm, softly rendered body and the cool gray-blue light outside creates a quiet emotional tension. Rather than functioning as a simple interior scene, the work becomes a meditation on distance, solitude, and the intimate act of watching the world from shelter.

OKSANA FILINSKA

(Marseille, France)

Main themes:

landscape, portrait

Preferred medium: oil painting in an impressionist style

This painting presents a reclining cat as a quiet study of poise, comfort, and self-possession. Warm ginger and white fur is rendered with loose, layered brushwork that gives the body softness and weight, while the green eyes hold the composition with a calm, alert presence. The muted interior setting keeps attention on the animal's posture and mood. Rather than treating the subject as a simple pet portrait, the work captures the understated authority of a creature entirely at ease in its own domain.

MARINA FISHER

(Phuket, Thailand)

Main themes of creativity:

landscape, still life

Preferred medium: impasto painting in oil and acrylic

This painting combines animal portraiture with floral charm and domestic intimacy. A small kitten sits in a hanging basket overflowing with flowers, while a lush landscape unfolds in the background, linking interior comfort with the promise of a garden beyond. Soft brushwork and bright, cheerful color give the scene a gentle, storybook atmosphere. Rather than presenting the cat as a formal portrait, the work captures a moment of tenderness, curiosity, and quiet enchantment.

Summer in the Cat Dimension, acrylic on canvas,
50x50cm, 2026, price: €500

This painting combines animal portraiture with playful pop-inflected still life. A black cat with luminous green eyes sits behind an oversized cheeseburger, turning an ordinary food item into a theatrical centerpiece. The contrast between the cat's calm, watchful presence and the exaggerated richness of the burger adds wit and character, while the vintage-style printed background reinforces the work's nostalgic, graphic atmosphere. Rather than presenting a simple humorous scene, the painting explores appetite, temptation, and personality through a deliberately stylized composition.

LADA KHOLOSHO

(Loksa, Estonia)

Main themes:

urban landscape, seascape,
nude, abstraction

Preferred medium: acrylic painting in impressionist and
expressionist styles

The Speed reimagines the glamour and theatrical confidence of Tamara de Lempicka's iconic self-portrait through the unexpected figure of a cat behind the wheel. Dressed in an orange driving coat, green gloves, and a flowing scarf, the animal appears both elegant and self-possessed, turning speed into a symbol of character rather than motion alone. The composition is frontal, symmetrical, and graphic, with bold contrasts of orange, green, and blue intensifying its cinematic presence. Blending wit, homage, and stylization, the painting transforms an Art Deco reference into a contemporary feline portrait of control, poise, and urban velocity.

This pastel portrait turns a black cat into a small sovereign figure. The delicate crown introduces a note of fantasy and wit, while the deep violet and blue highlights give the animal a luminous, almost theatrical presence. Rather than presenting a realistic pet portrait, the work plays with character and attitude: alert eyes, quiet dignity, and a hint of mischief. Intimate in scale and expressive in touch, the drawing celebrates the cat as both companion and ruler of its own imagined kingdom.

Main themes:

botanical compositions

Preferred medium: watercolor and acrylic painting

This painting turns a cluster of cats in the branches into a playful, dreamlike scene. Framed by oversized green leaves and warm orange blossoms, the animals appear less as separate portraits than as a chorus of curious presences emerging from the foliage. Their varied eye colors and tilted faces add rhythm and personality, while the dense vegetal setting gives the composition an enclosed, enchanted atmosphere. Rather than describing nature literally, the work imagines it as a shared world of watchfulness, humor, and quiet magic.

SLAVA MJOD

(Tallinn, Estonia)

Main themes: portrait, landscape, still life, abstraction

Preferred medium: oil and watercolor painting

Amber Eyes presents a dark, fluffy kitten emerging from soft gray-black washes, as if the figure were forming out of mist. The painting relies on remarkable economy: the body is rendered through blurred transitions and minimal detail, while the luminous yellow eyes sharpen the image with sudden intensity. This contrast between softness and alertness gives the work its emotional charge. Rather than functioning as a conventional pet portrait, the painting captures a fleeting state of presence—tender, watchful, and slightly untamed.

Cloud Cat presents a curled feline form with remarkable economy and softness. Built from fluid gray washes and delicate linear accents, the image hovers between portrait and apparition, as if the animal were emerging from mist. The restrained palette and open white ground give the work a meditative stillness, while the cat's alert eyes and fine whiskers preserve a quiet sense of presence. Rather than focusing on detail, the painting captures an essence: warmth, fragility, and the suspended intimacy of a creature at rest.

Little Wonder
watercolor on paper,

Little Wonder captures a curled kitten with striking tenderness and economy of means. Built from soft gray washes and delicate line, the image feels almost weightless, as if the animal were emerging from light rather than occupying solid space. The large warm-brown eyes become the emotional center of the composition, giving the work an immediate sense of curiosity, vulnerability, and quiet trust. Rather than relying on detail, the painting conveys atmosphere and presence through restraint, softness, and intimacy.

GALINA ORLOVA

(Dnipro, Ukraine)

Main themes: natural landscapes, seascapes, compositions with architectural elements

Preferred medium: oil, acrylic, and watercolor painting in an impressionistic style with elements of symbolism

This painting presents a black cat as a regal, nocturnal presence framed by an open window and a glowing moon. Gold accents on the crown, fur, and reflected light give the image a ceremonial radiance, while the deep blue sky heightens its atmosphere of stillness and mystery. The curtain and window frame create a theatrical setting, turning the scene into something between vision and apparition. Rather than functioning as a simple animal portrait, the work presents the cat as a symbol of inner authority, watchfulness, and night-bound imagination.

YULIIA PEPELOVA

(Bad Langensalza, Germany)

Main themes: natural landscape, cityscape, genre scenes

Preferred medium: watercolor, acrylic, and oil painting in impressionism

This painting transforms a sunset sky into a surreal apparition: a white cat emerging from the clouds above a city's rooftops. The monumental feline presence turns the atmosphere into a space of imagination, hovering between protection, dream, and quiet irony. Cool blues of the sky and rooftops contrast with the warm orange glow of evening, giving the composition both drama and tenderness. Rather than depicting a literal scene, the work presents the cat as a visionary presence suspended above everyday life.

Above the Rooftops, acrylic on canvas,
40x30cm, 2026, price: €250

This painting imagines a cat as a monumental cloud-form suspended above a distant landscape, shifting the scale of reality into something dreamlike and tender. Built from soft lavender, blue, and peach tones, the figure seems to dissolve into the sky while still holding the calm presence of a living creature. The small city below emphasizes the cat's vastness, turning it into a quiet guardian, vision, or passing thought. Rather than depicting a literal scene, the work reflects on wonder, altered perspective, and the emotional power of imagining the familiar at an impossible scale.

AVRORA BATYREVA

(Tallinn, Estonia)

Main themes of creativity:

figurative, still life, portrait

Preferred medium: acrylic
and digital painting

This painting presents a black cat as a bold, emblematic presence set against a field of white gestural marks and radiating red strokes. The simplified silhouette, wide circular eyes, and flattened space give the image an immediate, almost icon-like force, while the surrounding pattern creates a sense of energy, alertness, and expansion. Rather than describing the animal naturalistically, the work uses contrast and repetition to turn the cat into a figure of instinct, independence, and vivid psychic presence. The result is both playful and slightly uncanny.

This painting presents a cat resting in a clearing of dandelions, turning a familiar garden scene into an image of quiet charm and still attention. Soft gray fur contrasts with the fresh green field, while white seed heads and yellow blossoms create a light, rhythmic pattern around the figure. The cat's direct gaze gives the composition a gentle emotional focus, balancing innocence with presence. Rather than treating the subject as a simple pet portrait, the work captures a moment of calm companionship within nature.

(Brovary, Ukraine)

Main themes: urban landscapes, animal portraits

Preferred medium: oil painting in an impressionist style

The Night Sky, oil on canvas, 35x35cm, 2026, price: €300

This painting places a solitary cat before a night water view, turning an urban landscape into a moment of quiet contemplation. The animal is seen from behind, facing a lit bridge and its shimmering reflections, while a cloud-like cluster of pale blue marks hovers above like a moonlit thought or passing dream. Thick, broken brushwork gives the city and water a flickering, atmospheric presence. Rather than treating the cat as a simple anecdotal figure, the work suggests a shared stillness between observer and city—an image of solitude, attention, and nocturnal wonder.

Floral Boutique, oil on canvas, 35x35cm, 2026, price: €300

This painting captures the quiet charm of a flower shop façade, where abundant bouquets spill onto the sidewalk and a small black cat sits at the center of the scene. The contrast between the cat's dark silhouette and the pale blue storefront creates a subtle focal point within the dense arrangement of flowers. Loose, textured brushwork gives the display a lively, atmospheric quality, balancing urban stillness with floral abundance. Rather than depicting a street view alone, the work suggests a moment of pause, observation, and understated companionship within the city.

(Republic of Belarus)

Main themes of creativity:

landscape, floral compositions, animals

Preferred style and medium:

impressionism with elements of abstraction in oil, acrylic, and watercolor

Part of the series Tell Me About Van Gogh, this painting uses the familiar image of a cat to reflect on artistic memory and influence. Dressed as a painter and placed among brushes, worn shoes, and a framed bouquet of irises, the figure becomes less a character than a carrier of vision. The work does not quote Van Gogh directly; instead, it lets his presence dissolve into color, gesture, and atmosphere. Through a playful, accessible image, the artist reflects on how art continues to live in new forms and voices.

Tell Me About Van Gogh reimagines the memory of Van Gogh through a playful but thoughtful transformation. A cat appears beneath a swirling night sky, with a small bird perched on its shoulder and a village glowing quietly in the distance. The painting does not quote a single source literally; instead, it absorbs a painterly language—rhythmic brushwork, heightened color, and charged atmosphere—and translates it into a new, intimate image. Beneath its charm, the work reflects on how artistic vision survives by changing form and continuing to speak through new subjects.

Part of the series Tell Me About Van Gogh, this painting uses the familiar image of a cat to reflect on how artistic vision survives through transformation rather than quotation. Dressed in blue and seated before a cup of coffee, the figure is accompanied by a sunflower—an unmistakable echo that is not copied, but absorbed into a new, intimate scene. The work shifts the grandeur of art history into a quieter register of daily presence, where memory lives through color, gesture, and mood. Playful on the surface, it is ultimately a meditation on influence and on the enduring life of painterly seeing.

This portrait focuses on the quiet intensity of an Abyssinian cat, rendered with close attention to expression, posture, and light. Warm brown and cream tones give the animal a soft sculptural presence, while the large ears and upward gaze create a sense of alert intelligence. Set against a muted background, the composition remains spare and concentrated, allowing personality to emerge through subtle shifts of color and form. Rather than functioning as a simple pet portrait, the work captures dignity, curiosity, and self-possession.

Pallas's Cat (Still a Cat), oil on canvas,

This painting places a cat within a dense field of color, where figure and background seem to emerge from the same restless painterly energy. Quick, layered brushstrokes in blue, pink, green, yellow, and red dissolve the boundary between portrait and surrounding space, making the animal feel both present and elusive. The cat's watchful eyes hold the composition together, offering a point of calm within the visual intensity. Rather than functioning as a conventional animal portrait, the work becomes a study of mood, perception, and painterly transformation.

Old Town, oil on panel,
